

ARE LUCKY BALDWIN'S MILLIONS HOODOOED? UNHAPPINESS TRAILS DAUGHTERS

Are the millions left by E. J. ("Lucky") Baldwin tainted with domestic unhappiness?

Does the specter of divorce dog his great wealth? Have the marital infelicities which marked his own career, by some strange alchemy of life, been transmuted to the fortune which he left to his heirs, so that their happiness flees from their fire-sides when old "Lucky's" gold crosses their threshold?

Thus it appears to have been with the McClaughrys, who were happy before they were wealthy. But almost as soon as the Baldwin gold came to them they quarreled, separated and were divorced.

Thus it appears to be with the Selbys, whose separation became public recently and whose divorce is deemed inevitable by man and wife.

"We were happy until wealthy," said the husband, David F. Selby, of Oakland. "Shortly after receiving the inheritance from her father's estate, Mrs. Selby grew dissatisfied and commenced to lose interest in her home.

"She spent most of her time in travel, visiting different parts of this country and on her return announced to me that our home no longer held any attraction for her, and that she was going to leave for good. She left for Los Angeles and later came back and now resides in San Rafael, Cal."

The Selbys were married in 1906 and on their honeymoon visited "Lucky" Baldwin's Santa Anita ranch near Los Angeles. It was then that the aged millionaire recognized Mrs. Selby as one of his daughters and heirs. They have a 5-year-old daughter, Helen Frances Selby.

Like the Selbys the domestic troubles of Anita Baldwin McClaughry began almost as soon as she had received her $10,000,000 share of the turfman's millions. Until then the McClaughrys had been happy in their Berkeley (Cal.) home on the salary which the husband earned.

Then followed clashes, the pacifying services of friends, temporary reconciliations followed by other clashes, detectives, the kidnaping of their children by the husband and the legal battles which ensue when a wealthy woman and her husband cannot get along in peace.

After a stormy period which lasted for more than a year, the McClaughrys were divorced in Oakland, she paying the husband a cash settlement of $300,000 from the fortune that had come to her from her father.

---

EXPLORER MAWSON KNIGHTED BY KING

Dr. Douglas Mawson.

Among the persons recently elevated by proclamation of King George of England was Douglas Mawson, the explorer, who was awarded the title of Knight Bachelor.

---

Beat carpets on the wrong side first, turn and beat on right side.